Hacking and Nothingness: Finding Meaning in Information Security Work

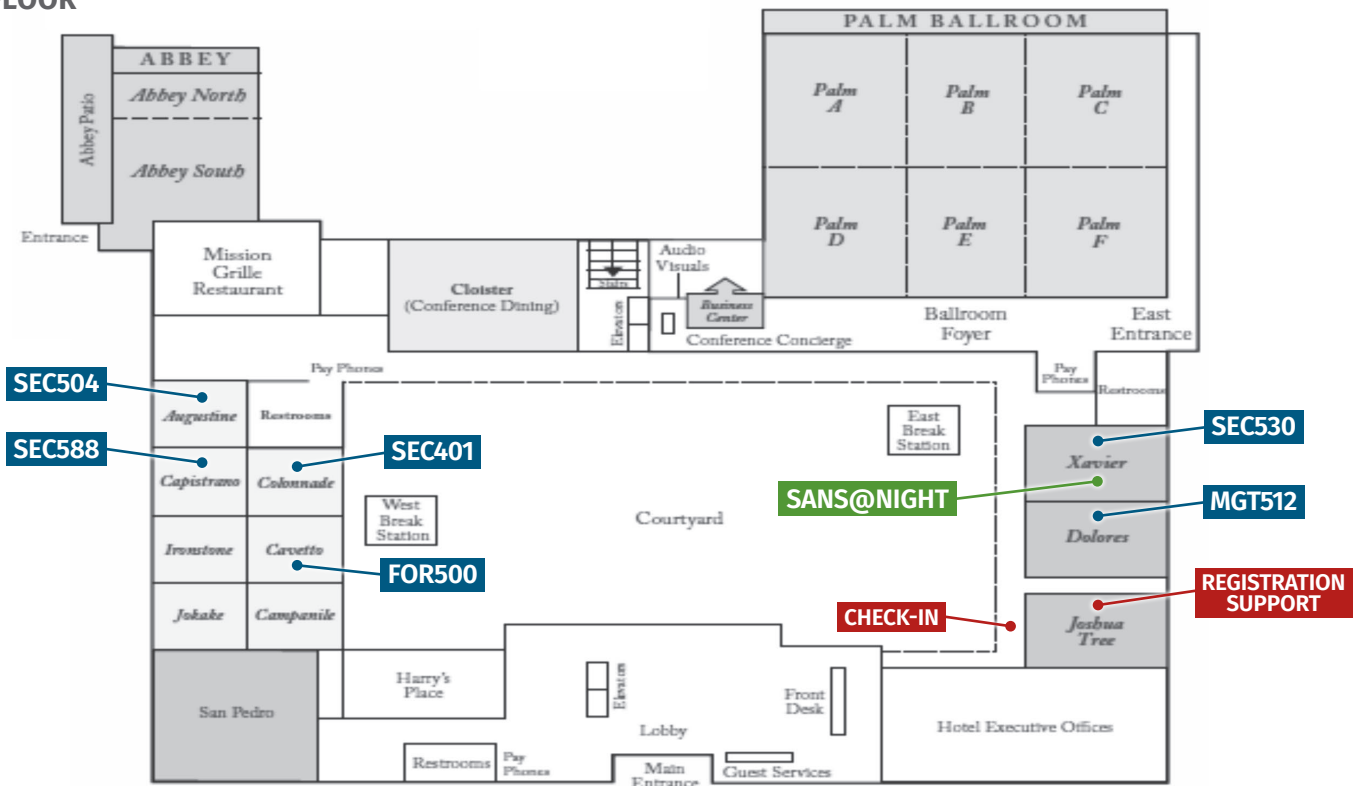

Speaker: Kevin Tyers, Certified Instructor
Wednesday, December 6 | 7:00–8:00 PM | Xavier (1ST FLOOR)

How does one find purpose in a cybersecurity career in the face of the ever-evolving threat landscape? How can one ascertain their individual significance in this vast digital realm? What tangible value does cybersecurity work bring to society at large?

Join me as we embark on an introspective journey, exploring the philosophical intersections between the age-old quest for meaning and the intricate tapestry of the modern information security industry. Together, we'll delve into the ethical dilemmas of hacking, the unwavering perseverance demanded of us in the face of relentless cyber threats, the broader societal implications of our work, and other vital facets that underscore the true value of a career in information security. Come find renewed inspiration and deeper appreciation for your role as a digital guardian.
