Kenneth is a financial services regulatory and fintech partner based in Hong Kong, with over 10 years of experience in the financial services industry. Kenneth is a qualified solicitor in Hong Kong and previously worked at the Hong Kong Securities and Futures Commission.

His practice focuses on advising on financial services regulatory issues and fintech/digital businesses. Kenneth advises on a range of issues including regulatory compliance, conduct of business, terms and conditions, AML/KYC, market abuse, digitisation, data privacy and artificial intelligence issues.

His clients include international and regional banks, broker dealers, asset managers, payment companies, digital asset service providers and technology companies.

He joined us from Freshfields Bruckhaus Deringer, where he served as counsel in their financial services regulatory group, and brings close ties with industry bodies such as the Asia Securities & Industry Financial Markets Association.

Kenneth speaks fluent English, Cantonese, and Mandarin.

A collection of 3D rendered numbers and symbols in white and light blue, scattered across the right side of the page. The numbers include 0, 1, 7, and 8, along with various symbols like a dollar sign, a percent sign, and a hash sign. The objects are rendered with soft shadows and highlights, giving them a three-dimensional appearance against the blue background.
