ONE ROOF FOR ALL RELIGIONS

THE first stone has been laid in a ground-breaking building that will host places of worship for three religions under one roof.

The House of One in Berlin will feature separate places for Christians, Muslims and Jews to worship, as well as a large hall designed to bring people from different faiths together for events and festivals. The foundation stone was laid as part of a ceremony to begin the build, which is due to be completed in 2025.

The ceremonial moment was witnessed by a Christian pastor, Jewish rabbi and Muslim imam (above), who put objects from each of their religions into the concrete. Imam Kadir Sanci described it as “a very symbolic step forward for us”.

THE WRONG WILLIAM

ARGENTINIAN news station Canal 26 made a big error after a man with a well-known name sadly passed away.

William Shakespeare was the first man to get the Pfizer COVID-19 vaccine, but he died recently from an unrelated illness. As you’re probably aware, Mr Shakespeare shared his name with a rather famous playwright, and that’s who Canal 26 thought had died.

Presenter Noelia Novillo announced the death of “one of the most important writers in the English language”, unaware that the Bard had died more than 400 years ago, in 1616!

NORTH KOREA

● Skinny jeans banned

North Korean leader Kim Jong-un has banned citizens from wearing skinny jeans or branded T-shirts, or having either spiky, dyed or mullet hairstyles. The secretive country’s state-run news agency says that the rules are to stop the country from “falling like a damp wall” to western culture, which is “decadent” (having no morals and only being interested in pleasure).
