ELAINE BROWN

CHAIRWOMAN ON THE THRONE

Elaine Brown (born March 2, 1943) is an American prison activist, writer, and singer. She was also a Black Panther Party chairwoman.

Elaine grew up in Philadelphia. Her mother, Dorothy Clark, worked hard to provide for Elaine's private schooling, music lessons, and nice clothing. During her childhood, she studied classical piano and ballet for many years. She graduated from Philadelphia High School for Girls, a public school for young women, and she studied at Temple University for less than a semester. After withdrawing from Temple, Elaine moved to Los Angeles, California, to try being a professional songwriter. While in Los Angeles, Brown enrolled in the University of California Los Angeles in September 1968. She later went on to briefly attend Mills College and Southwestern University School of Law.

During her time in California, Elaine became involved with the Black Liberation Movement. She also became involved in politics and began working for the radical newspaper Harambee. Soon after, Elaine became the first representative of the Black Student Alliance to the Black Congress in California. In April 1968, after the assassination of Dr. Martin Luther King, Jr., she attended her first meeting of the Los Angeles chapter of the Black Panther Party.

During her time with the Black Panther Party, Elaine helped to create the BPP's initial Free Busing to Prisons Program, Free Legal Aid Program, and the Free Breakfast for Children program in Los Angeles. It's said that the Free Breakfast for School Children program was one of the most impactful things that the Black Panther Party innovated.

In 1969, a large group of children sat down to a free breakfast before school. There were many things on the menu that looked like our school lunches today: chocolate milk, eggs, bacon, cereal, fruit and more.

However, this breakfast wasn't served by a school cafeteria. Instead, breakfast was served thanks to the Black Panther Party (BPP). The Black Panther Party was a revolutionary political organization founded by Bobby Seale and Huey Newton in October 1966 in Oakland, California. They had a message of Black power and a commitment to ending police brutality and the subjugation of Black Americans. One of their most important contributions to The Civil Rights Movement was their BPP Breakfast Program.

"The children, many of whom had never eaten breakfast before the Panthers started their program," the Sun Reporter wrote, "think the Panthers are 'groovy' and 'very nice' for doing this for them."

The Free Breakfast for School Children program began in January 1969 at an Episcopal church in Oakland, and within weeks it went from feeding a handful of kids to hundreds. The program was simple: party members and volunteers went to local grocery stores to solicit donations, consulted with nutritionists on healthful breakfast options for children, and prepared and served for free!

BLACK PANTHERS' BREAKFAST PROGRAM

School officials immediately reported results in kids who had free breakfast before school. They stated that many students involved in the Free Breakfast for School Children program were more engaged in class and happier.

THE IMPACT OF BROWN AND BREAKFAST

Elaine Brown has continued to advocate for civil rights and African-American people. From 1995 to the present, she has lectured at more than forty colleges and universities, as well as numerous conferences.

The Free Breakfast for School Children was embraced by many Black Panther Party posts, nationwide, before the party shut down in 1982. At its peak, the Black Panther Party fed thousands of children per day in at least 45 programs.

BPP's breakfast programs put pressure on political leaders to feed children before school. The result of thousands of American children becoming accustomed to free breakfast was that the government was pushed to expand its own school food programs.
