ICE NEWS

WOW!

THE Met Office has revealed that the UK has had its lowest temperature in 26 years.

Temperatures as low as -22.9°C were recorded in Braemar, Aberdeenshire. Brrrr! That's colder than a domestic freezer, which will generally be set to -18°C!

LIFE BELOW THE ICE

SURPRISED scientists have accidentally discovered marine organisms living 900m under the ice in the Antarctic.

The discovery of 16 sponges and 22 unidentified animals was made by researchers led by the British Antarctic Survey, who drilled through 900m of the Filchner-Ronne ice shelf looking for mud on the seabed.

They sent a camera down to take a look at what was going on and discovered the marine organisms, some of which could be unknown species, attached to a boulder.

“There’s all sorts of reasons they shouldn’t be there,” said one of the team. The discovery has led scientists to rethink the limits of life on Earth.

LONDON, UK

COLD temperatures caused the fountains in Trafalgar Square to freeze. Heavy snow brought a week of freezing temperatures to many parts of the UK.

BRRR-ILLIANT ART

THIS amazing artwork has been created entirely from footprints in the snow.

A team of volunteers stomped their way through the white stuff to create this super cool snowflake design. They used just snowshoes and lengths of rope.

The whole thing took two days to complete and measured an impressive 160 metres across. It was created at a golf course in Helsinki, Finland, and could be the largest snow-drawing ever to be made in the Nordic country! Artist Janne Pyykkö came up with the idea for the frozen fun.
