

NATURE BINGO

The changing of the seasons is a great time to head outside and embrace all the changes that are happening in nature.

If you have just been through summer, the first hint of cool from autumn can be a great feeling! Similarly with winter, the first hint of spring is energising!

Use this nature bingo game as the starting point for a time of exploring. Whether it's in your own backyard, your neighbourhood, or further afield, take the time to notice the small things that are happening around you.

You can use the coloring pages for an inside activity, or use it for bingo, coloring in objects as you find them.

Write down any questions you might have on the scavenger hunt, so you can do some research later.

requirements

printed pages

pens or pencil

extensions:

If nature bingo is popular with your kids, they might like to try nature journaling as an extension to your outdoor activities. You can start with drawing pictures of their favourite parts of the walk, and you can find lots of information online.

the moon

A cloud shape

a bird

mushrooms

spider's web

Seeds

an interesting stick

as many different colored leaves as possible

a rock

A leaf falling

a cloud shape

a bird

bees

bird's nest

butterfly

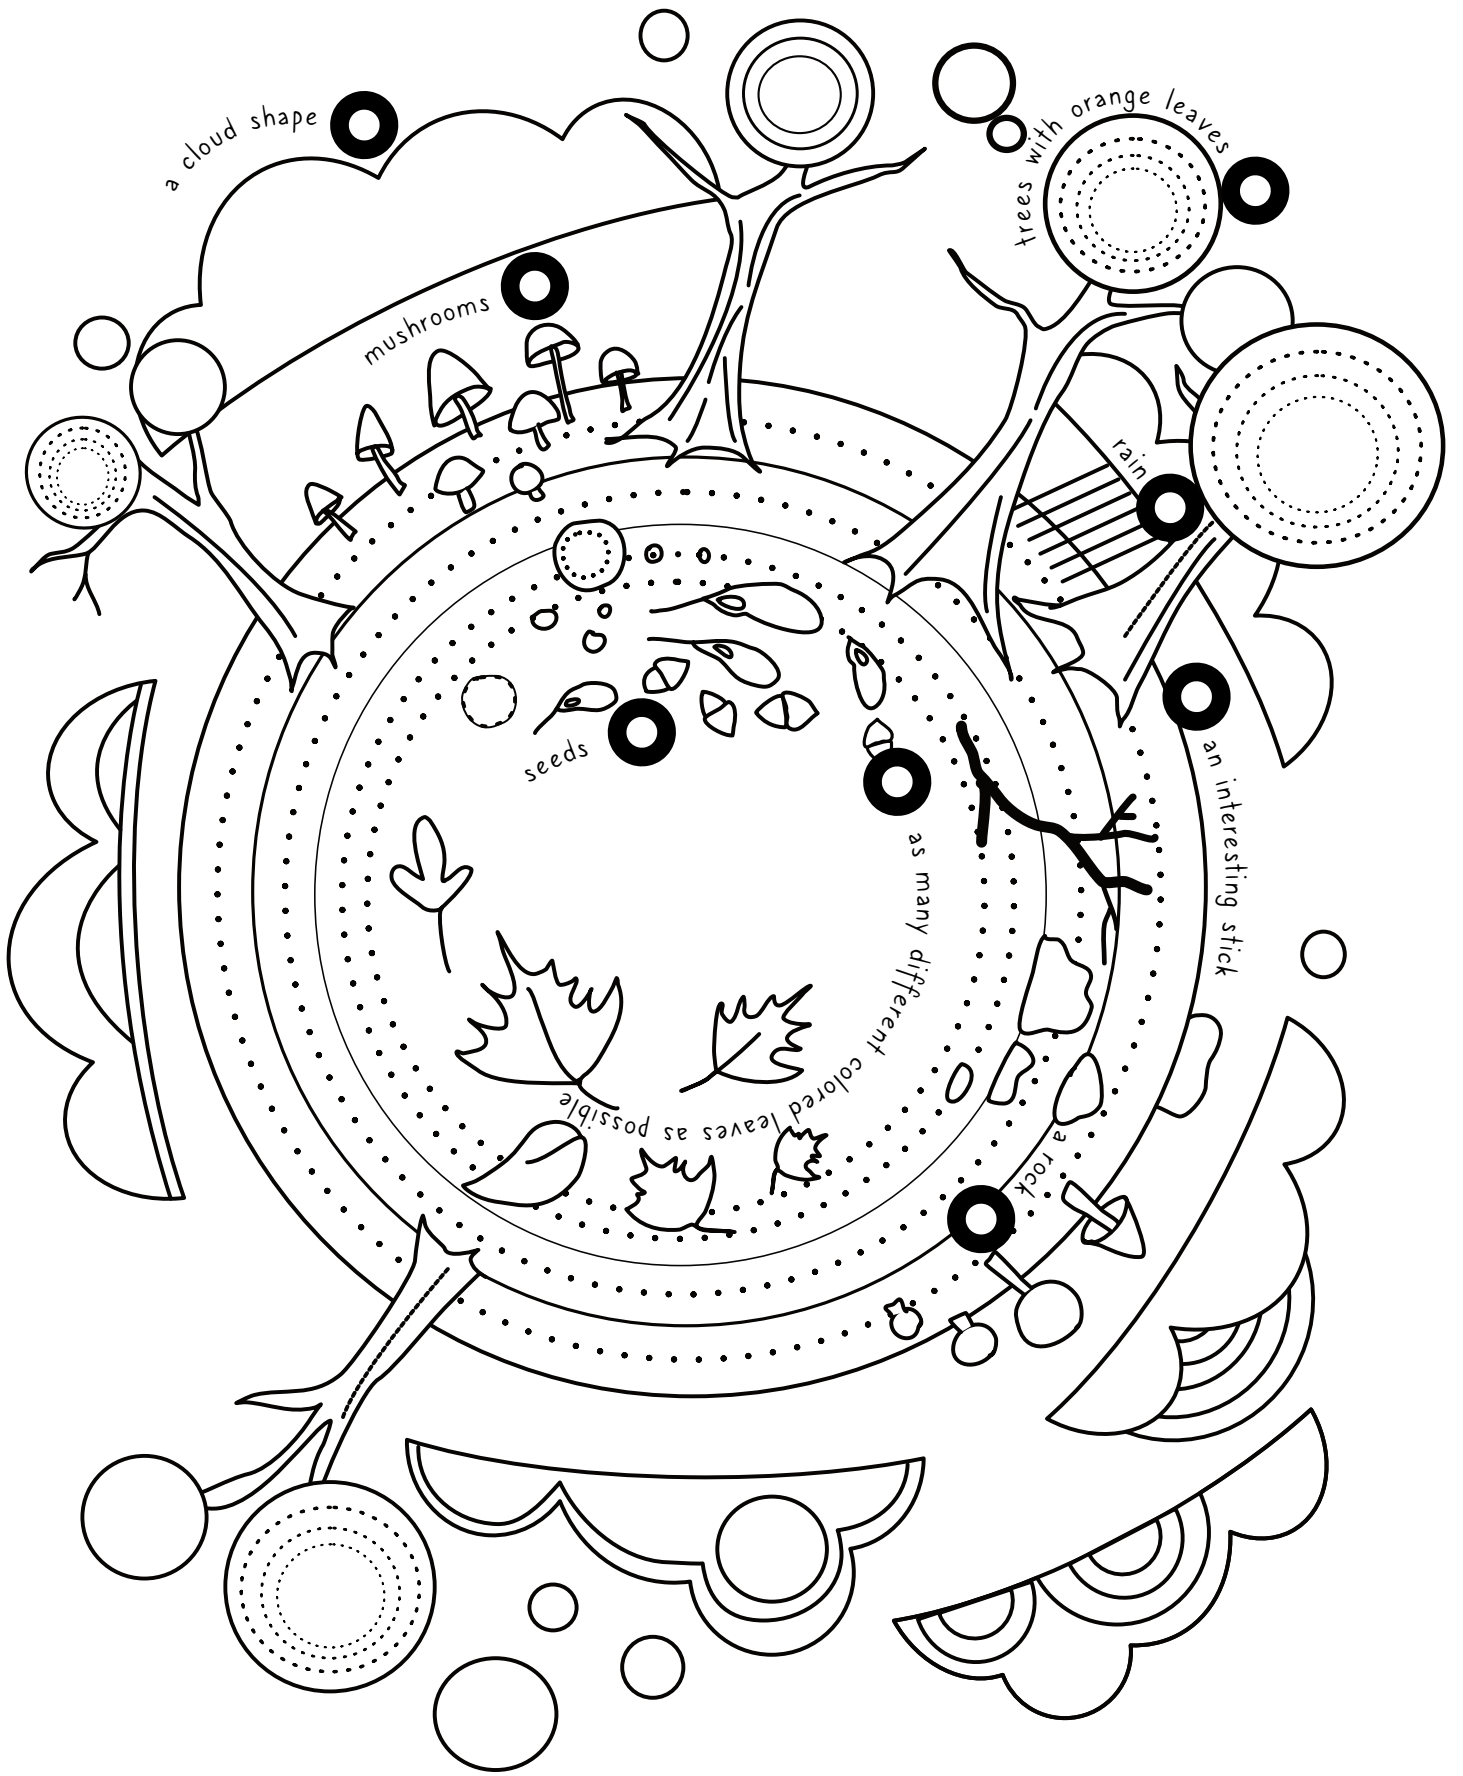

as many different colored flowers as possible

rock

new leaf

bug

feather

a cloud shape

mushrooms

trees with orange leaves

rain

an interesting stick

as many different colored leaves as possible

seeds

a rock

a butterfly

a bird

bees

a bird's nest

as many different colored flowers as possible

a rock

a new leaf

a cloud shape