TOURNAMENT HISTORY

The Big Ten Conference crowns two champions during the tennis season.

The "Big Ten Championship," also known as the regular season championship, is determined by a round-robin, dual match schedule. This year Ohio State went 9-0 to claim its 18th consecutive title.

The final Big Ten standings determine seedings for the Big Ten Tournament. The "Big Ten Tournament Champion" receives the conference's automatic berth into the NCAA Tournament.

The Big Ten Tournament format, in its current incarnation, dates to 2009 and the tournament has been deciding team champions since 1934.

The format has changed several times. In the early years, singles and doubles titles played a factor in determining team champions (creating many ties). In other seasons, dual match records were combined with tournament results.

In one form or another, Big Ten schools have been meeting annually to conduct a championship since 1910, a tradition now in its 114th year.
