

2026 ACR Gout Health Disparities Symposium

The American College of Rheumatology's Collaborative Initiatives will host a half-day virtual symposium this summer to provide rheumatology professionals with education surrounding the clinical application of disease diagnosis and treatment into their practice. This summit will focus on Gout, one of the most common forms of arthritis with a high disparity burden.

This event will only proceed with support and participation from our partners in industry.

We invite you to join us as a sponsor of this unique meeting bringing together researchers, principal investigators, rheumatologists, referring physicians and industry leads to participate in discussions around Gout awareness and treatment.

Your participation includes:

- Logo Recognition in Symposium Program Book (distributed electronically to all summit participants).
- Opportunity to provide panel participant for a 45-minute session (5–7-minute speaking opportunity).
- Logo recognition in splash reel that will play in between sessions.
- Logo recognition on the event website.
- 2 invitations to attend the summit.

4 Opportunities available, $15,000 each
