

AMERICAN COLLEGE of RHEUMATOLOGY

Empowering Rheumatology Professionals

FELLOWS-IN-TRAINING PROGRAM

In an effort to secure the future of rheumatology, the American College of Rheumatology is committed to providing educational opportunities for rheumatology fellows-in-training during their fellowship.

A high priority of the ACR is to fund all fellows-in-training that are members of the ACR to attend all ACR meetings at no charge. Currently, there are over 650 fellows-in-training in both adult and pediatric rheumatology training programs that are members of the ACR. We estimate this program will cost approximately $500,000 annually.

As a key stakeholder in rheumatology, we invite you to join our mission to bring high quality experiences to the future of rheumatology.

What will your contribution support?

Fellows-in-Training through:

- In-Person attendance for all ACR member fellows-in-training to attend ACR Convergence, Education Exchange, Rheumatology Research Workshop and PRYSM (in applicable years).
- On-demand access to ACR meetings (when available) to all ACR member fellows-in-training, regardless of in-person attendance at meetings.
- Fellows-in-Training Program during ACR Convergence.
